Board puts hospital up for tender sale

By Stuart Adams

Tenders are being accepted for the 3.14 acre site and 22,000 square foot Drayton Valley General Hospital. This move was made by the body owning the hospital, the Drayton Valley General and Acute Care Hospital and Nursing Home District 77.

"We feel we should do the best we can by the public," said DVGANNED board chairman Ivan Vowk.

At present the board has received an offer from Alberta Housing Corporation which excludes the value of the building. AHC wants to build a senior citizens' centre on the land, but they view the hospital as a liability.

"The board feels we should call for offers for the land and the building," said Mr. Vowk. "The hospital itself has some value and we feel we shouldn't be penalized for the demolition of it."

Hospital director Jim Jansen said the land and the buildings have been appraised at slightly over $1.3 million according to the town tax rolls. "The building is structurally sound, but it doesn't meet the present standards for a health facility," he said.

"That's why we're building a new facility."

"But there's no reason it can't be used for something such as offices or a recreation and culture facility."

Mr. Jansen said the board understands Alberta Housing's position and that the site is ideal for a senior citizens' home. But he said the board feels the building is too valuable to be demolished when it could be used within the community.

Drivers making work difficult

By Stuart Adams

If local drivers can co-operate the work being done on 50th Street between 48th Avenue will go smoother and faster. Border Paving supervisor Grant Smith said he expects the job to be finished within two to three weeks if the weather holds, but drivers are creating a hazardous situation by ignoring posted speed limits and running over barricades.

"It's a bad situation," he said. "They ignore the barricades and pay no attention to the welfare of the people who are working."

"Traffic is heavy and if they could go the other way it would help a lot."

He continued that construction on the Highway

DRIVERS RUNNING OVER BARRICADES have been a problem on the 50 Street construction site.

22 end of the same has progressed to the point that people going to the day care centre can do so via the highway with no problem. A reduced traffic load would help his cause a lot.

Curbs and gutters were laid on Thanksgiving Day and he expects to be laying down soil cement in preparation for paving today. "We can't have any 'off' on it for a week once we put the soil cement on it if we can't have within 24 hours." Again, the weather will be the deciding factor.

But barricades are still being run over and the worst spot has been on the north end of the detour. At present he has a 10-man crew operating eight machines, but when paving begins there will be 30 people operating 20 machines.

Mr. Smith said he appreciates the way local businessmen have put up with the problems. "There have been very few complaints considering the disruptions."

Drayton Valley museum to open this month

Plans are currently under way for the opening of a museum in Drayton Valley sometime this October.

According to Drayton Valley and District Historical Society president Neva LaBranche, the museum is expected to start in a small way with displays in the public library and in a basement room at the County of Parkland building.

At present, the historical society is collecting articles or photographs of historical significance as well as written collections of pioneers' histories, said Mrs. LaBranche.

She added that the society has already received approximately $1,500 in donations for the museum as well as additional offers of old oilfield equipment and displays.

The money is presently being set aside for the museum's operating and renovation fund with future plans of using the money for acquiring land and building a museum. "We said."

Currently the museum is in the County of Parkland building. However, this is only a temporary site as the society eventually hopes to have its own building.

With this in mind, the society is hoping to get an operational grant from the Alberta government sometime next year, said Mrs. LaBranche.

Anyone who is interested in donating or loaning artifacts to the museum is asked to phone 543-2005 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from Mondays to Fridays and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays. Enquiries on the historical society may also be directed here or at meetings which are held the last Monday of each month in the Drop-in Centre at 8:30 p.m.

WCC fails supporters

They were the hottest thing on the market last spring, but Gordon Kesler and his Wild and Crazy Cowboys have frittered away what chances they had to form the next provincial government.

The WCC's newest electoral asset of granting $1000 to each voter is laughable and makes one wonder where they got the idea from. The campaign has just started and Peter Loughheed must be asking himself why he didn't call the election sooner.

At a press conference last Friday Kesler offered another goodie. The Heritage Savings Trust Fund would be used to provide a $500 million home mortgage program. After several attempts he was quoted as saying, "Just tell them (the public) it will save them money. They'll understand that."

With that kind of logic one could expect to see the WCC put the Heritage Savings Trust Fund into Super Loto tickets. Look at it this way—with $11 billion you could buy 1.1 billion tickets.

If only 15 thousand of them were grand prize winners you would walk away with $15 billion—all of it tax-free. That doesn't even include all the minor prizes which would come your way.

Not a bad piece of high-finance business. Unfortunately the WCC has failed at what it set out to do. They're muddled around and come up with nothing in terms of an alternative to the Conservatives.

Their little support indicated dissatisfaction among the ranks of the public with the present government. They have betrayed the hopes of the "little guy" who felt left out of the running of his government.

Voting your right

A recent disclosure by Alberta's chief electoral officer cites this province as traditionally having the lowest voter turnout in the country.

In a Friday press conference Ken Wark said other provinces have turnouts ranging between 70 and 84 per cent. Our last election in 1979 drew 59 per cent of the electorate.

The axiom "You get the government you deserve" applies. It isn't difficult to find dissatisfied individuals on the streets, but where are they when it comes to election time?

Once every three or four years we have an election. The amount of time it takes to stand in a line-up to decide who administers your tax dollars is insignificant.

It probably takes less time than it does to get in to see a movie. Yet between 10 and 15 per cent of the electorate less than throughout the rest of the country can find the time.

When was the last time you went to a movie?

Editor's Notes

I've been in Drayton Valley for almost two months now and ever since I came into town from the east I've been bothered by our town sign.

Although it looks as though it was once an attractive work, it's faded and almost indecipherable. It's the sort of thing that finally made me stop and have a closer look at it; it didn't help, it's even worse when you get up close to it.

Our town council is busy and has a number of things to deal with, but the sign is the first impression people get of our community as they come in from the east. It should either be replaced or removed.

One side-light to the election, you'll notice that The Western Review was able to come with the election announcement on the same day as the dailies.

Premier Loughheed's timing of the call was interesting. He could have made the announcement on Monday, but by delaying until Tuesday we were able to pick it up in time for our Wednesday issue.

There are almost 100 weeklies in the province and most of them come out on Wednesday. By calling the election on Tuesday, after the dailies had already hit the streets, he was able to have coverage of the announcement in both the rural and urban newspapers.

More notes on the election. A friend in Edmonton told me over the weekend that Conservative candidate Lou Hyndman had his campaign office set up by the end of the day the election was called.

He works across the street from the office and said Hyndman's people started moving things in in the morning and were ready to go that evening.

And nobody knew when the election was going to be called?

Perspectives

by Chris Shanahan

The hockey season is upon us once again, and judging by the condition of the local arena, it should be another good year. The Town recreation staff has been putting in long, hard hours over the past week in an effort to ready the ice surface for the yearly onslaught of skaters. Calvin Bannfield and his staff have been assisted by a special helper in much of their tasks over past months. Young Dale Howatt joined the recreation department this summer in a work experience program run in conjunction with the Beehive Workshop. His enthusiasm and willingness to learn was evident on my visit down to the arena last week. Dale has proved to be a valuable asset to the department, and he took an active role in the preparation of the new ice surface. Keep up the good work, Dale.

Retractions or corrections aren't the most popular items with writers, but when you make an error like I did the other week, one is obligated to make amends. Somehow I referred to the local cadets as an army squadron, when in fact they are an air cadet squadron. I'm sorry for any inconvenience caused members of the 733 Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron by this mistake.

My partner in crime for the past 16 months packed up her crime knife and fine gauge for good this week. Roxanne "you looking for a scrap, house?" Gusek has left us to take up managerial duties at a hamster breeding ranch situated southwest of Drayton Valley. She'll use her invaluable experience in the communications field in her new task of training Hammy Hamster television show. Mrs. Gusek realizes that superstars like Hammy, G.P. and Mathew Mouse can't last forever, so she's turning all her efforts to raising a bumper crop of hybrid rodents.

Priorities for community should be considered

Dear Editor:

You have two interesting comments in the Oct. 6 issue of the paper. One is that because times are hard there will be a cut back in funds for recreation, a "non essential service." The other is that we can do something positive for our community by getting involved in the Volunteer Probation Officer Program. I thought it very significant that the average age for "clients" of the probation program would probably be between 16 and 21.

It is indeed wonderful that our county and town offer courses for us to learn to entertain ourselves, but there are a large number of town residents whose needs are all but ignored and whose opportunities for entertainment are very scanty. They are between the ages of our and 18 which they can finally go to the bar, and their choices for inexpensive recreation are pretty well limited to Boy Scouts and Girl Guides. I have not seen much evidence of school-sponsored interest clubs on any other community sponsored activities. If we really think that recreation is non essential perhaps we should reconsider our priorities; perhaps if we become more involved with our young people now we won't need so many volunteers to help them out once they have become criminals.

Hunter shoots cattle dog

Dear Editor:

On Oct. 4, 1982 at 5:45 p.m., some immature, ignorant, so-called hunter purposely shot my valuable Blue Heeler cattle dog, which was within throwing distance of my building.

This idiot could easily have shot my son, or horse, which were also in the immediate area. Luckily he picked my dog and not my son, as he was only 150 yards away.

In my opinion this dog is more intelligent than the person who pulled the trigger.

If this is the class of person that is allowed to carry firearms, the public isn't safe in their own living rooms.

This incident took place on private property. If this person is that ignorant he can't tell the difference between a dog and a game bird. I wish he would step forward so that any child could show him the difference.

Your Comment

Do you think this was the right time for the provincial government to call an election?

Dan Schadeck

Tombahack
I think the way they've been running things, they should have called one a long time ago. They spend our money foolishly.

Kathy Morrow

Drayton Valley
Yes I do, absolutely. I think after Loughheed put in the mortgage rate of 12% per cent for everybody, he should run while it's still fresh in our minds.

Jim Wilson

Drayton Valley
No, I don't think Kesler is ever going to get in. I predict Loughheed is going to win in a sweep.

Jackie Jaramila

Drayton Valley
I like that, ya.

Frank Gurnick

Drayton Valley
Not really, no. They should have waited until the spring. I think it would have been better.

Rural Crime Watch poster-essay

contest requires work

By Roxanne Guehr Research on crime prevention will be one of the major prerequisites for school children entered in the Rural Crime Watch poster and essay contest. The contest, which ends Dec. 1, is designed to encourage children to learn more about crime prevention, said Rural Crime Watch secretary Maureen Schwab. She added that the contest is open for Grade 4 to 9 students in the Drayton Valley, Tomahawk, and Lodgepole areas. Although the contest focuses on crime prevention, the themes of the poster and essay contents vary. The poster portion of the competition, for Grades 4, 5 and 6, will look at various ways of preventing crime in rural areas while the essay for grades seven to nine will focus on how the Rural Crime Watch organization helps to prevent crime in rural areas. She went on to say that the posters will be judged on their basic concept, originality and art content while the essay will be judged on its content and the author's knowledge of the subject. There is no limit to the length of the essay, added Mrs. Schwab. "We are encouraging as many kids as possible to enter the contest, not just the rural ones," said Mrs. Schwab. Although she was quick to caution would-be contestants that anyone "who wants to take it on will have to do some research." Information about the association may be obtained either from the local RCMP detachment or District Agricultural Officer Doug Walker at the Provincial Building in Drayton Valley. The deadline for the contest is Dec. 1 and all entries must be submitted to the Alberta Agriculture office in Drayton Valley. Prizes of $25 will be awarded in each category, said Mrs. Schwab.

Harvesting the old-fashioned way

The old ways of harvesting have almost fallen by the wayside, but efforts last weekend and this coming weekend will help keep them alive. Ted Bruner, a Mohl Oil employee who works in Drayton Valley, and Lyle Lyster, another oilpatch worker, both decided to stook and thresh their crops this year.

Mr. Bruner put in 10 acres of oats on his land about seven miles north of Evansburg. His brother Jeff and the rest of the family and some neighbors helped finish the harvest last weekend.

Mr. Lyster expects to thresh around 60 acres of oats on his farm in the Windfield area this weekend. He and a friend and neighbor, Walter Hughes, are hoping to take off 50 bushels to the acre.

For Mr. Bruner it was a way to "keep in touch" by putting in a few acres. He bought a horse-drawn binder this summer and Jeff bought a separator and they had the equipment to do the job.

After cutting the crop they spent about two hours each evening for a week putting up the stooks. "That's a long way from a record," said Mr. Bruner, sitting on a hay rack during a coffee break.

"When you get to the actual threshing it's fun," he said, "but the preparatory work is damn near discouraging."

Three teams drew loads to be fed into the 1953

Waterloo separator. Ted had his own team of two-year-old Percheron crosses on one hay rack and neighbors Sam Olson and Rob Trimble had theirs on their own.

The men bantered back and forth about the merits of the different breeds. Mr. Trimble, owner of a pair of Belgians, said "There's only two kinds of team owners—the guys who have Belgians and the guys who wish they had."

Ted's father, Merle, spent some of his time driving his son's team. As he held the horses beside the separator he said he first started threshing when he was 17, some 47 years before, and the last time was in 1977. "This was always my favorite time of the year."

One of the other team owners, Sam Olson, from Birchfort Bridge, said when he started threshing in the late '30s he was paid $1 a day.

Usually one man worked with a team, pitching the stooks onto the rack. "Sometimes you had a field pitcher, sometimes you didn't," he said. The last time he worked for pay he received $7 a day in 1957.

The work was a little easier last weekend than in those days. For most of the afternoon there were about 20 men helping pitch the stooks onto the racks—heads first, and into the separator, heads first again.

With the good weather the men worked, but in-stable breakdowns and coffee breaks meant they expected to spend a few hours the next afternoon. Ted said he expected to take off about 800 bushels.

Lyle Lyster and Walter Hughes decided to thresh their crops as much out of necessity as desire. "We decided it was the cheapest and easiest way and we didn't have the equipment for combining," he said.

This is the second year they will have threshed. Lyle's father Jim has been showing them the ropes as they've worked, but with him working in the day they've been left to most of it themselves.

Lyle said one of the reasons they prefer stooking is that they can still get the stooks off even after snow. The first weekend in October they woke up to find almost three inches of snow on the ground.

They had originally hoped to use a horse-drawn binder, but with it needing repairs they took parts from it for their tractor-drawn machine.

Other than that they hope to have three or four teams of horses in the fields as well. Jim said he wouldn't mind people stopping by to look as long as they stay clear of the people doing the work.

It may be the old way, but it's also the hard way, and it's still work no matter how much it looks like fun.

The Council of the County of Parkland No. 31 intends to construct a Connecting Corridor consisting of approximately 7.4 km and relocate Parkland at the Duffield School in the Duffield S.D. No. 3296 to consist of:

Construction - Materials and Labour $61,000
Moving 3 Parklands from Stony Plain $21,000
Relocating 3 Parklands on Site $3,000
TOTAL $85,000

The actual division of costs between the School Foundation Program fund and the Council will be determined within three years from the time of acceptance of tenders or other schemes of construction.

If you do not agree that the Council should borrow this amount, you may petition for a vote in accordance with the provisions of sections 2, 3 and 112 of the School Act.

The petition must be signed by or least:
(a) 2 percent of the electors in a district or division having 10,000 electors or more, or

Council may be televised

Members of Town council may soon be popping up on local television screens if CTVV has its way.
A proposal by the local cable station to televise council meetings once a month brought mixed reactions at Thursday's regular council session.

Mr. Olsen argued that television coverage could be detrimental to the smooth operation of council.
"I don't feel the members of this council are actors. We don't need it," he connected.

Mayor Bob Mayhew questioned the legality of televising the meetings, but he later agreed that because council sessions are open to the public, the CTVV proposal is a viable one.

Alder Flats holds mortgage burning

Last Saturday night was a big night for the Alder Flats Agricultural Society as they celebrated the final payment on their new community hall. The $400,000 building was paid off in four years and a strong showing of community spirit helped make it possible.

Local, totalling $80,000 were secured by $1,000 promissory notes signed by individuals in the community. With the dissolving of the loan, each signatory was released and a ceremony was held to mark the occasion.

One by one their names were read out by Norm Moore, who gave the people their letters which they then burned in a bonfire.

Agricultural society president Al Melzack spoke to the people assembled. "Thank you everyone for what you've done and every one of you should be proud."

The society began in 1976 with about $25,000 on hand and raised another $70,000 through special events and donations. One hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars in grants were given out by the provincial government; $75,000 as a one-time grant for the formation of an agricultural society and $10,000 in MCR funds. The final $120,000 came from direct loans. The provincial government guaranteed $40,000 and the residents signed for the other $80,000.

A fund raising auction was held and a dance followed.

Keephills move a unique project

In 1978 TransAlta Utilities pursued development of the Keephills Power Project to meet the province's need for electricity for the early 1980s. This new thermal plant would be supplied with coal from the Highgate Mine.

The community of Keephills is located partially within the area defined as the Highgate Mine. Composed of approximately 120 families, the community would have eventually been disrupted by surface mining activity.

The significant impact that the Keephills Power Project would have on the community of Keephills prompted TransAlta to initiate a unique resource planning program with the community.

The hamlet of Keephills consists of a school and teachers' home, telephone exchange and four private residences. The survival of the community of Keephills depended upon the survival of the hamlet, the social and physical centre of the larger community. It is in order to maintain the identity and integrity of this rural community, TransAlta agreed to relocate the hamlet, providing individuals and organizations residing in the original location with equivalent land, services and buildings in a new setting.

In 1977 representatives of the community and company jointly selected a planning consultant to proceed with plans for the new hamlet. The community selected an 80-acre site, eight kilometres north of the existing hamlet. Located in a pine forest and traversed by a creek, the site was aesthetically attractive without imposing on farm land. This recommended location was accepted and purchased by TransAlta. Dialogue with the community continued until a subdivision plan was selected and approved by various government agencies in January 1981. The relocated hamlet of Keephills consists of 31 one-acre residential lots, one commercial lot, an eight-acre school-community hall site and a 28-acre environmental reserve.

Construction activity began in 1981. Road routes were cleared, access and onsite roads were constructed and utilities were installed. The four hamlet families selected their lots and construction began on two houses.

The community of Keephills and the County of Parkland agreed to construction of a joint-use facility to replace the separate school and community hall in the original hamlet. On Oct. 21, 1981, a road turning ceremony was held to initiate construction of the school-community hall facility. The new facility was scheduled for completion in August, 1982, and was officially opened Oct. 8.

Look what's in the library

By Lois Peterson
It's that time of year again Fall—synonymous with signing up, putting, registering, becoming involved. Time spent improving our bodies, our communities and all the while keeping us generally occupied so we do not dwell upon the fact that Old Man Winter is just around the corner and getting ready for a prolonged visit.

On the subject of jolting, perhaps some of us can see ourselves in the following anonymous writing.

Memberships in every organization is made up of four kinds of bones.

There are the wishbones who spend their time wishing someone else would do the work. There are jawbones who do all the talking but little else.

There are the knucklebones who knock everything that anyone ever tries to do.

And finally, there are the backboneers who get under the load and without them, an organization is nothing!

Patrons' choice winner for the month of September is Grace Mueller whose book review wins her a mystery gift.

Don't forget the welcome mat is outside the library six days every week. It's your library and exists for only one purpose. To serve you! We welcome you and invite you to use all its materials and services. There's something for everyone, whatever your needs, interests or tastes.

For the practical person there are books on building, and making things. For the adventurous, there are travel books, novels, biographies. Check the selection of love stories, westerns, murder mysteries and science fiction.

There are books on art, music, drama and other cultural pursuits. For business-minded folk, there are assorted materials on managing and operating a business, personnel management, supervision, finance and much more.

Log homes making comeback

Log homes once meant the backwoods cabin of yesteryear, however, today they can be anything from a ranch style house to a two-story chalet. Styles can include everything from a basic bungalow to a modern energy efficient house with solar heating, said Edwille resident Dan Crockett. Mr. Crockett, a former member of the Evansburg RCMP, has only recently become involved in the log home industry. Since this spring his company, TDC Contracting, has obtained a northern Alberta franchise for log homes. This means that instead of constructing frame houses, he now puts together pre-cut log homes. The log homes are originally built at 100 Mile House in British Columbia and then shipped to Alberta where they are reassembled and finished in place.

Although log buildings have been around for a number of years, it is only recently that their popularity has again asserted itself.

It seems like more people are becoming interested in log homes as they discover how energy efficient they are, said Mr. Crockett.

He added that the new log homes also provide homeowners with a variety of styles. There are no longer the square boxes that contractors were building during the housing boom, said Mr. Crockett.

He went on to say that now that people are less affluent they are looking for something with more style and quality.

They are no longer just looking for a house but rather something that can be a home, he said.

According to Mr. Crockett, a number of log home companies have sprung up over the last few years. Although methods vary with each company, they are all involved in volume log building and construction design.

The log homes of today can be compared with those the settlers built as methods of construction vary so much.

The log homes of today are built with the aid of chainsaws and cranes instead of the tools and back-breaking labor of earlier times.

Conditions today can be completely controlled with logs available from a variety of places throughout Alberta and British Columbia.

Background on current CPA board chairman

By John Gorman
Back in 1968 when Harry Carlyle graduated from the University of British Columbia with a Bachelor of Applied Science degree in engineering physics, he didn't expect to become the senior vice-president of Gulf Canada Resources.

And at that time, the Canadian Petroleum Association had not yet been launched, but Harry has persevered long enough to the oil patch to become the current chairman of the Board of Governors of that group of major Canadian oil and gas producers.

Speaking in his capacity as CPA chair, Mr. Carlyle recently gave an appraisal in Vancouver of Canada's natural gas supply and demand situation.

Said Mr. Carlyle: Gas consumption in central Canada—Ontario and Quebec—while it represents 63 per cent of Canada's population, accounts for only about 48 per cent of total consumption.

The prairies, with about 17 per cent of the population, uses 17 per cent of the natural gas production which totals slightly less than 8 trillion cubic feet per year. Of this total, 17 trillion is used in Canada and about 1 trillion is exported to the United States.

Demand in Canada is expected to double to about 3.4 trillion cubic feet in Canada by the year 2000. Some growth is forecast for the 1980s with the gas pipelines now pushing east of Montreal to markets hitherto unserved.

The federal government currently encourages conversion from imported oil to domestic natural gas by pricing natural gas at a substantial discount which currently amounts to about 30 per cent.

Export volumes of natural gas are expected to grow in the 1980s if the National Energy Board approves all of the current applications on file. The applications are asking for approval to export 27 trillion cubic over a period of 25 years.

In making its decision for export, the NEB requires that the industry prove it has reserve volumes equal to 25 times current annual Canadian demand.

It also takes into account reserves required to meet current export contracts and it also looks at the industry's ability to deliver its reserves to market.

It is Mr. Carlyle's opinion that the NEB may not approve all of the current applications on file, but he is optimistic that the Canadian natural gas industry will continue to find and develop new reserves of gas, particularly in the frontier and offshore regions.

Every now and then I'll be given a zucchini so big that I spend a fair bit of time trying out recipes to use it up, preferably without the family saying "Not that stuff again!"

The last one went into soup and this casserole.

Zucchini Noodle Casserole

1 1/2 cup butter

1/2 cup milk

1/2 cup onion

1/2 cup zucchini

1/2 cup vegetable or chicken broth

1/2 cup milk

2 cups cooked zucchini (about 3 cups raw)

4 cups cooked noodles

1/2 to 1 cup dried fresh tomatoes

1/2 to 1 cup dried bean (optional)

1/2 cup sliced, parley and parmesan

Season to taste, adding nutmeg slowly until just before you can taste it. Let mixture cook and thicken.

Add noodles, tomatoes and ham, sprinkle with parmesan, parley with lemon and parley, and serve.

Makes four servings.

Note: This is good made with whole wheat noodles if you can find them.
